The essence of erosion is that under the influence of rain, snowbreak, irrigation water and winds, the upper layer of the soil is washed away, resulting in reduced soil fertility.

Over the last 50 years, 50% of the world's forests has been deforested.

More than 70% of soil pollutants are carcinogens and they increase the risk of development of various disease in humans.